Genealogy of the Cossart Family
1662 - 1932

Cossairt

Genealogical - 27.50

PREFACE.

This being a general record of the descendants of JACQUES COSSART'S family in America, I have tried to get individual records of each generation of the family history. Any ommissions will be acounted for by failure to receive the desired information; any errors ascribe to misinformation.

This partial and incomplete outline has been prepared for the purpose of being corrected. You are requested to note any errors or ommissions and to furnish such additional information as will make possible an accurate and complete tabulation of the "Clan of Cossart".

Lineage forms for the purpose of submitting your lineage, corrections, alterations or additions to this tabulation may be obtained from Joseph A. Cossairt, The Lexington, San Pedro, California, who is interested in collecting a complete history of all branches of the family in the United States and will be pleased to receive any information of any kind relating to the family. It is intended to use such matierial in an enlarged and more complete edition on the Cossart family.

"NO LIFE IS SO HUMBLE BUT HAS ITS NOBLE SIDE,
NO CARTER SO OBSCURE BUT HAS VALUE TO THE FAMILY WORTHY OF RECORD".

EXPLANATION.

The variations of the name are numerous. In this outline the surnames are, in most cases, written out only when the sons and daughters of the next succeeding generation bear a surname differing from that of their fathers.

1 - The symbol "x" means that the exact form of surname is unknown to the investigator.

2 - The symbol "///" indicates that the complete lineage of the person has not yet been fully established.

3 - The letters "d.s.p." indicate that the person died without issue.

CHAPTER 5

"No time is so much wasted as that spent in making an excuse."

Many people spend their entire lives making excuses for why they haven't achieved their goals. Excuses are a way of avoiding responsibility for our actions. Excuses are a way of avoiding responsibility for our actions. Excuses are a way of avoiding responsibility for our actions

GENEALOGY AND A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE

COSSART FAMILY

1662-1932.

FOREWORD.

The first COSSART family to come to America were French Huguenots, their homes being in northern France, a branch still live there, near Rouen, and another branch has lived in Holland since 1607/8.

The branch of the family whose descendants are found in the following genealogy came from France through Leiden, Holland, to the American colonies in 1662.

Baird's Huguenot Emigration to America, Volume 1, pages 182-3, comments in part as follows: "...in the case of the earlier emigrants, the greater number of these refugees made their way to Holland, and from Holland not a few, between the years 1697 and 1663, crossed over to America. For the most part they were natives of the northern provinces of France. Among those that came to America were ..... Philippe Casier ..... JACQUES COSSART, with two children and wife Lydia, came from France via Holland, probably from Picardy, in Normandie or Bretagne, France, about 1662 ..... etc. etc.".

The surname in the United States is variously spelled COSSART, Cosart, Cosort, Cousart, Cosat, Cosatt, Cossatt, Cossaart, Cossairt, Cassairt, Cassat, Cassatt, Casad, Cosad, Cosad, Cozatt, Corzatt, Crozatt, Cozart, Cozort, Kazatt, Kershaw, Gossert (German), etc. etc.

Those people who use the surname Cossett or Cossitt are descended from the immigrants Francois or Rene Cossitt who arrived in Connecticut from France early in 1700, and are probably unrelated to the COSSART family in America, and those families whose surname is either Cossar or Cosser are also unrelated to the COSSART family, they having come to this country from the British Isles. It is claimed the Cossar family were originally from Spain and emigrated to Scotland when the Moors overran the former country.

A great many of the descendants of JACQUES COSSART in the United States still retain the original and correct way of spelling the surname, but use the German or Dutch pronunciation by sounding the final "t". This is probably due to the fact that there were so many intermarriages with the Dutch and German races in New Amsterdam, New Jersey and Pennsylvania in the early days. In their native language (French) the final "t" was not pronounced, the name ending as in "r", i.e. "KO-SAR".

The origin of a name is not always easily found. In many cases the spelling has been twisted and distorted caused by the persons writing, or inscribing them/by the provisional or dialectic pronunciation,
